

Planning for lifetime housing

Where your son or daughter lives when you can't be there, and what to settle while you can.

Five questions for the plan	FIL's answer
Where will they live?	A private apartment at Cypress Shores in Coconut Creek, on their own lease.
Who helps day to day?	Independent Living Coaches, one-on-one. Three staff live on site; support is available 24/7.
How long can they stay?	There is no end date. Luise Mishner, from one of our founding families, has lived here more than 40 years.
What if their needs change?	FIL isn't set up for medical conditions that need clinical monitoring every day or week. Plan now for who would coordinate a move if that happened.
How is it paid for?	FIL is private pay only; we don't accept insurance or Medicaid. Ask your attorney or planner how housing fits the plan.

When to start

Earlier than most families expect. A move goes best while parents can help with it, and FIL's trial stay of a night or two lets a young adult try it before anyone decides.

Questions to ask on any visit

- Who will my child see every day, and how long have they worked here?
- What happens on a hard day, and at 2 a.m.?
- How long do residents stay?
- What does a normal week look like?

Talk with us Call (954) 968-6472 or visit filinc.org. This guide is not legal or financial advice.